Tragic End of Heir to Ottoman Throne Part of Enver Pasha's Plan to Rule Islam

REMARKABLE LETTER BY TURKISH HEIR IN WHICH HE HINTS AT ASSASSINATION

Tomosuff Issedin, heir apparent to the throne of Turkey, who, according to despatches from Athens, committed spicies at the command of Enver Pasha, his litter enemy, wrote the remarkable the which follows from the Dolman Baghehe Kioak, where he was confined by the Germanisand Ottoman Government because of his pro-Ally sympathics. The letter is addressed to one of the members of the Turkish Partianess and throws a peculiar light on the circumstances under which the Turkish heir is supposed to have med his fals.

Youssouff Izzedin.

Princess es Messenger.

Cursed be those who for gold invited the cruel strangers into our midst.

I grieve from the bottom of my heart that I did not stand on public squares and shout rebellion against this perfidious regime, whose cruel hands have sacrificed hundreds of thousands of our Moslem subjects and victimized more than a million of our innocent Christian subjects.

I cannot sleep. My brain is a hell, and all the devils are in it. I feel my mind is giving way under the strain. They have cast me into this confinement without notice. I, the future sovereign of this empire, am being watched like a criminal by those vulgar beings who receive their few pieces of silver from the hands of the betrayers of their fatherland. But what do they know about fatherland? They, like dogs, follow those who promise them their daily bread; and, like dogs, these military guards are faithful to their masters.

I feel that I can no longer senarate the real from the imaginary; and amid all these thronging fancies about my future empire, which come and go, is one ever present that fixes itself on my tortured heart. That I.

my future empire, which come and go, is one ever present that fixes itself on my tortured heart. That I, the heir to the Ottoman throne, the gentle, the compassionate, should be execrated as a traitor and cast into prison by the very betrayers of my country and empire!

Innocent yet guilty, I, the coming Sultan, am powerless as a child in the hands of the betrayers of my country, native and foreign.

The woes threatening our empire, the iniquity of our regime, the criminal intrigues of its Ministers, turn me into a thousand strange and fan-me into a thousand strange and fantastic combinations. Shame without. Ruin within. The air is full of dolorous voices and menacing shapes.

Ruin within. The air is full of dolorous voices and menacing shapes.

Now I am an unfortunate rayah in the grip of faithless foreigners and of pashas of yesterday who have bought their way to power by gold, and a poor wretch turned his eyes piteously toward them for help!

I pace back and forth the limited space of my room. I cannot sleep. If I could only forget the dire calamities which are threatening our country for just one minute. I warn you all, my sacred countrymen, not to allow yourselves to fall into the clutches of the cruel regime without rendering yourselves serviceable to your country. Do not fall into the hands of the destroyers of our country without making your lives costly for them. Intrigue by night and execute by day. Preach disloyalty to the criminal regime and by fair or foul means remove all the traitors from your midst.

If you must resort to violence, which I believe you must, commit the act in the open. Let the rest of the timid Osmanlis see and, hear your act and your heroic indignation. Do everything possible to disrupt the usurped power of the trencherous regime.

I do not hope to reloin you, my faithful countrymen; you who know how to fight when led, fight the heroic fight for your land and your children, until you have terrorized your gedless rulers into submissiveness.
